Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. It is beyond comprehension that we would consciously reduce the minimal protection of a non-renewable ecosystem, thus ensuring the endangerment and eradication of countless marine species, as well as, ultimately, our own. Do the right thing: don't cave to special interests whose only focus is on their own enrichment, regardless of the costs the rest of our planet will ultimately pay.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

We used to think that our oceans were vast enough to dilute any pollution put into them. Over the years however, as the world's population increased, development exploded in many countries and somehow we thought consequences wouldn't catch up with us. The Mississippi Delta has become so polluted with agricultural runoff that there is a 'dead zone' nearly two miles out from the shore. Overfishing (with some not very sporting tactics) has diminished and even endangered some species. Coral reefs are dying at an alarming rate, and cruise ship lines regularly are fined for dumping waste and oil into our oceans, but these fines are considered the cost of doing business. We are systematically destroying our oceans and we need to reverse course. Please - protect our oceans and do not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Please do everything in your power to protect our oceans and do not allow existing essential fish habitat guidelines to weaken! I'm writing to voice strong support for increased protection of our marine ecosystems. The health of the oceans is in our hands, and I support any measures that increase ocean and coastal protection.

Water quality is of utmost importance to protect all life on this planet. I strongly urge you to see that sources of pollution (e.g., cruise ships) are addressed and that plans are developed in case of oil spills and other environmental catastrophes. We need to ensure that our oceans support--not destroy--the life they hold. It is critical that we recognize and protect marine diversity.

Thank you for your time and your efforts in support of our precious marine environment.

Sincerely,

How much more can we take from the ocean,
and expect it to recover.

We have to have to start protecting what we have NOW,, we can't keep putting it off to the next generation.

The notion that the oceans are so big they will absorb and dilute all the chemicals (from sewers and pesticides) and quickly rebuild from overfishing will eventually turn the tides against us.

As world citizens let us accept this responsibility to cast aside our own profits and egos in order to protect that which ultimately protects us, the grand and glorious Pacific.

At the rate we are overfishing our oceans and using nets that trap dolphins and sea turtles especially, all the trade fishermen will be out of work permantly.

Isn't it smarter to limit their take now and to make nets safer for the nontargeted fish than to not have any fish left to catch, or having all the oceans as dead zones insted of the numerous we have now?

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

a few years ago "world watch" noted that the total value of the fish harvest was less than the cost to produce it. the difference was government subsidy. please try to do your job and dont bow to special interests. in harwich ma fishermen are learning landscapeing successfully

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We can not afford to weaken the guidelines that exist. If we continue to pollute the oceans we will eventually end up destroying our quality of life. We have been warned not to eat the larger fish because of their mercury content and with continued pollution and over fishing we may just all have to become vegetarians. I happen to love to fish and I would hate to see the day when I would have to give up that pleasure because everything I catch is not edible.

It is IMPERATIVE that we protect life in the oceans!! There will be a huge ripple effect of disaster if we allow fish habitat to be dessimated by weakening guidelines. PLEASE FOLLOW YOUR CONSCIENCE and do the RIGHT THING.

Do NOT allow big money interests to win. Their win is only temporary because the oceans will slowly die if we allow fish habitat to shrink.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened. Please do all you can to protect the health of our oceans for us and future generations.

Thank you for your attention.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The oceans have been badly neglected and have received less focus than other environmental issues on terra firma. This is not the time to loosen up policies to protect habitat and marine life.

Sincerely,
Suzan Carne

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I have just returned from a trip to Chile. I travelled the length of that country, down to the bottom of South America. What I saw there was so well protected, that I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The fishing industry does not wish to deplete the very source of its livelihood. And I am sure you do not wish to deprive U.S. citizens now and in the FUTURE of our beautiful oceans.

PLEASE DO NOT WEAKEN THE PROTECTION BUT HELP TO CONSERVE THE OCEAN HABITATS.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Special interests are intent on changing our protections. Your actions and decisions will maintain or destroy the existing ocean protections.

The current administration has not shown that they have the best interest of this precious resource as a priority. They have shown just the opposite. Hopefully you will lead us in the direction that brings out the best that you can do.

That in the future we will look back on your efforts and decisions with admiration. Someday I want your legacy to show how one individual can leave a positive imprint.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. In fact, I urge you to tighten up on the standards. I spent 18 years working in the Alaska fishing industry and can attest to the decline in all species that I'm familiar with, with the exception of the Bristol Bay salmon stocks. They appear to be well managed and continue to have healthy runs in most years. All the other fisheries seem to be in decline and need stiffer regulations to insure that the harvests are sustainable. Degredation of the environment is one of the big causes, as well as over fishing. Do your best to protect the remaining fish stocks. Millions of people rely on those fish for jobs and food.

Sincerely,
Mike Meagher

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The Administration's assault on both the oceans themselves and the coastal habitats which support them, primarily in instances where oil drilling is at issue, has been unprecedented. They must be reversed and new protections put in place, before the damage which Bush's corrupt policies have wrought becomes irreversible.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Reports released this month by independent non profit organizations summarize that our waters are in extreme danger of being unable to sustainable fish and ocean habitat in the long term.

I live on Puget Sound in Washington State and see on a daily basis how our waters impact land and fish. Changes occur over a long period of time, therefore, corrections or efforts to reverse damage will also take a long time to work. We need to start now and to keep our waters viable.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We are at a point where, with care, we can undo damage done. If guidelines are weakened for the temporary benefit of special interests it will be to the loss of all permanently (thus my use of the word "temporary" benefit). Lack of concern has led us to this plight. We must act responsibly for the generations to come (and indeed the younger generations of today).

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Protecting fish habitat is important for our future. We need to think of future generations. If we exploit the earth and its life there will be nothing left for our children and grandchildren.

Please help to give all species a chance to survive. A balanced eco system will help us humans to have a place to live.

Sincerely,

Gabriele Schuster

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans are already in poor condition. Instead of being worsened, they must be protected. All life on earth depends on the health of the oceans. If humankind is to continue to survive on earth, the oceans MUST be protected. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Thank you.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I have become increasingly distressed by the ecological effects of the fishing industry in particular. I fear that the treatment of this fundamental resource - the ocean ecosystem - tends to be more recklessly damaging because it is so hard for most people to notice it. For this reason we should be extra vigilant and extra cautious.

Thank you for your time.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Over the past forty years I have sailed the coast of California. Every year the fish habitat shows evidence of deterioration. This state of affairs cannot go on longer lest we end up with a cess pool or worse. Please work to reverse the trend of past years so that my children and grandchildren can enjoy the ocean as I have.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I recently went snorkeling on the coast of Santa Cruz Island, off the coast (to the south) of Santa Barbara. There was a disturbing population of sea urchins in this pristine environment. Disturbing because it's a sign of an unbalanced ecosystem, and it can be degrading to the environment for other species that live there. I learned from a marine biologist on the island that harbor seals, originally native to the island, eat sea urchins. There are not enough harbor seals around anymore, due to overhunting. Special interests groups supporting fishing have prevented the reestablishment of the harbor seal in this environment. As a result, other species have flourished, to destructive levels.

This is just one example of special interest groups influencing environmental law for their own financial gains. Seeing the results first-hand is very disappointing. We all rely on the interplay of many species in an ecosystem for survival. Laws that do not honor this relationship are more than inconsiderate of "lesser" species; they're dangerous. We're only at the top of the food chain because the food chain is under us.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Sam Diaz

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Those in place came about through a long and thoughtful process. We are learning more and more of the devastating effects on ocean life by our shortsighted treatment of this sector of nature, but to make changes in policies to protect it is such an uphill battle. It is better to go slow in relaxing guidelines, if at all, but to work harder in strengthening guides to promote the health of ocean life..

So many of our protections for the earth are in danger of being removed or relaxed that I fear for the next and the next generation, perhaps even our own. The ocean must have strong management to protect the ocean's and the fish habitat's health. Special interests must be kept at bay not only for the future but for the present as well.

I have just returned from doing research with four marine biologists in the Monterey Bay area of California. All of them are extremely alarmed at the appalling state of our oceans, especially our fisheries. The oceans are essential to this state - as part of the beauty that attracts us to live here, for the food we eat here, for the commerce that flows to us from it, and for the myriad of life it sustains.

To neglect the ocean or exploit it for short-term gain will be the long-term damage for the entire state. One does not poison their blood or neglect their health without consequences. the health of the ocean is the health of all citizens in the Evergreen State.

Plankton, being a food source for many, is definitely affected by what we humans do to this Blue Planet that we depend upon. Thank you, in advance for supporting the protection of our oceans.

I am a retired Oceanographer with an MS degree from Scripps Inst. of Oceanography,

La Jolla, CA in 1948 followed by decades of experience as a govt. oceanographer.

I think it is a grave tragedy the way our govt. has allowed 70% of the Earth's surface and its life to be so exploited and abused. Fortunately, as my 86th birthday approaches I won't be around to see it worsen much more.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Without healthy fish habitat, we can not have plentiful populations of healthy fish. This puts at risk all those who depend on fish for their livelihoods and as a source of protein. The cost of this loss would be far greater, both financially and healthwise, than the benefit to a few special interests can justify.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to.

Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Incredibly, special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections.

Don't be a patsy of these special interests, and work to protect our valuable natural ocean environment.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. They are necessary to keep our waters the way they should be, as dictated by the laws of nature. They are an essential link of the food chain and maintaining their survival guarantees us safer waters for leisure. The impact on health would be tremendous, because unwanted algae and bacteria that the balanced ecosystem maintains within normal limits would be altered and we would suffer many more dermatological problems, as well as fresh water contaminations resulting ultimately in contamination of ourselves.

As a health practitioner, I can tell you that most people do not value their health until it is gone. Fortunately for many of them, we can help them to recover much of their health, but only if they are willing to work hard and sacrifice their old ways of living.

Similarly, with the ocean, once it begins to die, there is little we as individuals can do for it, and there is no way we can survive without a healthy ocean. Please help the people realize how important it is to practice conservation for our planet!

It was headline news this week in the Wall St. Journal and Seattle papers, about the recent report showing so much damage to the oceans from pollution, habitat damage and overfishing.

If humans are the smartest (and most adaptable and wisest???) creatures and capitalism the best economic system, shouldn't long term/far-sighted decisions conserving, protecting and restoring habitat and fisheries take precedence over short term/near-sighted decisions

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Marine habitats the entire world over are being eroded by overpopulation and all its by-products--sewage pumped into the ocean, overfishing, industrial activity, ship fuel, oil drilling and spills, etc. are all doing irreparable harm to nature. Please do all you can to protect California's ocean wildlife and habitats from destruction. Big businesses do NOT need more license to ruin the oceans in the interest of profit. Thank you very much.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Especially since this recent report regarding the poor health of our oceans and the need for us to react to pollution and overfishing globally as opposed to regionally, it is extremely important that we strengthen our conservation efforts for the oceans. If anything, we need more protected fish habitat, not less. Please strengthen the fish habitat guidelines.

Instead, they are to be strengthened considerably, if we are to survive our selfish behavior of overeating certain several species of endangered to becoming endangered fish. Remember, the word selfish, as in sell fish, too much.

Those in charge of this market must put a cap on their resource, which is all of our resource. Citizens must monitor their own private consumption, or be monitored by others, such as friends, if these kind of friends still exist. The word out should be, "We are in perilous need of fixing this massive problem of which we have only seen the tip of the iceberg. If we don't do something now, we will all die!" Not by robots that turn on us, or intergalactic aliens, or even terrorist. Our main concern should be ourselves, and self-terrorizing, and whether we care, or not to be truly evolutionary, as in evol being love spelled backward.

I believe we are all special interest. If a big company wants to come along and show its true colors by asking our government to be less stringent because of money, and our leader agrees, then they are in violation of special human interest law, which declares the sanctity of all life on Planeta Terra, and that life must be protected. We can not fool around any longer, and must shake ourselves awake in order to realize the errors of our ways. Even now, start eating less fish, and start thinking of ways to get our oceans cleaner. The President is in need of better education, as we all are. We all have violated Terra-Oceana's law. We all need to answer.

As far as cruise ships are concerned, it's not just the oceans they pollute, even now the skies are hotter than before, and pollution laps along our shores, that once were splendid, teaming with life, as the elders still remember. We need a real pow wow!

Sincerely,
MAC Cepeda

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

It is expected that more of our food supplies will have to come from the ocean. If we destroy these habitats now, they will not be there when we need them.

Additionally, the collapse of food fish populations has a tremendous negative impact on the people who depend on these industries for their livelihoods. The Monterey Sardine fishing and canning industry collapse is an excellent example of the kind of economic and personal upheaval that can result from a failure to regulate ocean ecosystem use. Granted, the sardine populations have now recovered, but isn't it preferable to avoid these crises in the first place?

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The only way that I can make sense of Bush's total lack of concern for our environment is that he is of a faith that tells him there will be an apocalypse - the end is inevitable - and to try of save the earth is futile. I'm afraid that line of thinking in heads-of-state (such as Bush) leads heavily to self-fulfilling prophecy. I'm not trying to take a shot at his faith - just trying to make sense of what seems to me to be senseless.

Please keep fighting on behalf of our ecosystem. We just might be here a lot longer than many of us presently believe.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I live 1/2 mile from Puget Sound and am very sensitive to the health of the Sound. I am aware that NMFS is working on possible changes to ocean protection. I hope that you'll take a very conservative approach, in the traditional sense of that word. Once a resource is tainted, it is very difficult to repair. I hope that we will have a focus on first preventing further damage, and second trying to prepare a foundation to undo the damage that has occurred.
